

TOYS MADE NOISE LIKE REAL BURGLAR

Then Mrs. Stackfleth 'Phoned Police a Sound Like a Frenzied Summons.

PLATOON IN ROUND-UP.

Washington Heights Block Surrounded and Searched to Reveal "Choo-Choo" Things.

Over the wire to the telephone operator in the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street station, at 3 o'clock this morning, came this in a finely drawn, nervous voice:

"This is Mrs. Stackfleth—Mrs. Clara E. Stackfleth—No. 460 West One Hundred and Forty-first street. My husband is Paul Stackfleth."

"Yesum," said the operator, who is still polite even five hours before breakfast time, "glad to make your acquaintance. What did you say your husband's name was?"

"Burglars are trying to get into our house," went on the voice. "We can hear them trying to get in a back window and walking around."

"Fine," said the operator. "I tell you what to do, lady. If they get in, don't you bother 'em till they get there."

Sergeant McNulty and Policeman Birmingham started on a gallop uptown.
On the way they gathered every patrolman they met, so when they reached the block of handsome private residences in One Hundred and Forty-first street, between Amsterdam and Convent avenues, there was quite an imposing party.

Searched, But Found Not

After the row of houses had been surrounded, McNulty went to the front door of the Stackfleth house and was admitted by the household who came down on a masse to let him in. The Stackfleths were positive that they had heard the house-breaker climbing over the roof of an extension at the level of the second floor in the rear. But there was no sign of them now.

The sergeant aroused the sleepers in the home of Clifton G. Edwards, next door. They hadn't been disturbed—that is to say, they hadn't been disturbed until McNulty did it. The policemen searched the block and the vacant lots behind it. They went through the terrace of St. Nicholas Park and the grounds of the College of the City of New York. Nothing doing.

Finally they came back and gave the Stackfleth house another search. In the nursery, upstairs, they came upon a collection of handsome mechanical toys belonging to the two children of the family—walking manikins and trains that run by clockwork and such things.
So the police hit upon the conclusion that somebody had wound up some of these toys with a time lock or something, and then had gone away and forgot them. Result—a lot of iron man-ikins and choo-choo cars piling up around on a hardwood floor at 3 A. M., producing sounds similar to burglars trying to get in a locked window in another part of the house.

COLUMBIA'S BIG OPENING.

Matriculation Into Class of 1911 Largest Known.

With the matriculation of a record class of 1,911 students, Columbia University to-day began another college year.

In the absence of President Nicholas Murray Butler, who is expected home from Europe Saturday, it was planned to have the students welcomed by President James E. Russell, of Teachers' College, while the formal opening address was delivered by Prof. James W. Burgess, dean of the School of Political Science.

Our 51st Anniversary Sales

Celebrating Fifty-One Years in Business

THIS sale is not the impulse of a moment—it is the result of six months' planning, backed by the merchandise experience of fifty-one years' successful storekeeping. The markets of the world have been drained of their best products that you might secure the best only—no quality too good, no style too classy and no price too low for Ehrich Bros. to advocate. Looking back over half a century, we pronounce this the greatest bargain festival of the Greater City. We have set a value-giving standard difficult of attainment by any other store, as these low prices witness:
